UNLUCKY THIRTEEN.

"Bulldog" Carney had been at it again. It was horses this time, and when horses follow a man off without rhyme or reason there is often shooting from one side or the other.

And the owner of the horses that had gone off with "Bulldog" Carney up in hospital in Fort McLeod with a plug of lead in his lung. He was a "rascal" himself, and the general opinion was that Carney had only stolen from a thief.

But the plug of lead—that was a different matter. A man has got to be pretty tough before the shooting of him counts for nothing.

So Sergeant Hetherington and Constable Williams were sent out with three days' rations to look Carney up in one direction, while a couple of other constables took the trail in another.

Apch riding and the viewing of much open plain were the results of the first day's campaign.

On the second day they rode again, but the plain was not quite so open. There were several lakes and various other interruptions of the vista.

"What's the sense of this?" said Hetherington to the other constable. "You might as well look for a needle in a haystack or a prayer book in barracks as look for Carney in this God-forsaken hole. We'll never get a sight of him."

So they camped where they were, beside a small lake, and smoked the pipe of peace and ate their rations and cursed the government that had cut their pay down to 50 cents a day, howbeit the sergeant was getting more than that now since his promotion. But that was regulation form, the routine, and so they smoked long and swore hard and denounced the service anyway as being no good to a man, for it made him lazy and unfitted him for anything else, and it was a wild goose chase, and Carney was a hundred miles away, and they were a pair of fools, as great as the man who had sent them out.

And with the gray regulation blankets pulled over their heads and their feet warm against the blaze of the smoldering campfire they slept—slept the prairie sleep, which is long and deep and strong and as unlike the other as a strong growing bush is unlike a hothouse plant; slept among the wild roses and great yellow marguerites and the little wondering sunflowers: slept on the dry, crisp grass, that was as a gentle spring mattress.

And as they slept a man came and looked at them and pulled at his blond mustache a little, reflectively, and then stepped back into the night again, and all was still, only the munching and occasional stamp of a horse's hoof over on one side, where the horses were picketed, and the little, sneezing blow of the noses of the feeding animals as they cleared the dust out of their nostrils.

"There were ducks flying over all last night," said the sergeant as he pulled on his long boots. "They're nesting here in these lakes, and I'm going to have a look for some eggs."

Soon a voice came up from the reeds and cattails growing in the edge of the lake to the constable as he busied himself at the morning fire:

"Come down here, Williams. They're slathers of eggs here."

The ducks there were as other ducks. They pulled down the lance-like blades of grass and plaited them into nests just out in the water's place. That was Dame Nature's insurance scheme, but she hadn't reckoned with the sergeant and his merry constable. The long boots and the gray socks and the brown trousers were off in a jiffy, and with shirts tucked up under their arms the two warriors were soon filling their helmets with duck eggs.

"I've got me bat full," said the sergeant, "and here's a nest with 13 eggs in it. What'll I do?"

"Better leave it alone," said the constable. "Thirteen's an unlucky number."

"But I want the eggs," pleaded the sergeant. "It's unlucky to go on tinned beef when you can get fresh eggs. Besides, me luck couldn't change for the worse anyway," he added as he thought of what the exile life in that lone land meant.

"Well, then," said the constable, "if you don't mind the bad luck wrap them in your shirt, and I will hold your champagne." And he waded over to the other and held the helmet.

"I'm a square looking bird now," said trail back a piece, and we'll move on to the next post. I want to give this man Carney up to strangers, you see. I'm afraid his friends mightn't treat him well. Anyway I think you'd better ride back to meet me."

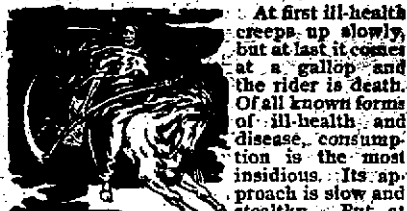

Bill galloped away on his errand, and after putting in an hour or so to give him a good start Carney and his prisoner struck camp and followed up.

Bill met them about five miles out of Maple Creek and reported that there wasn't a soul in the troop stationed there that knew Hetherington. "But they're dead on to Carney's racket, though," he said, "and when I told them that we'd captured him they thought 'twas a pretty slick piece of business. They say he's harder to trap than a coyote."

"You see," said Carney to the sergeant, "the easier you take this thing and the less racket you make the better you'll get along. If you get rusty and insist that you're sergeant, some of the fellows'll round on you, and the bad luck the 13 eggs brought you'll be nothing to the trouble that you'll get into then."

As soon as they got into the fort Hetherington saw at once that Carney must have been in the force at one time. He asked for the sergeant major as soon as they rode into the barracks square and asked him to report to the superintendent that he had brought in the desperado Carney, who was wanted for horse stealing and shooting a man.

"I was afraid to take him back to

At first ill-health creeps up slowly, but at last it comes at a gallop and the rider is dead. Of all known forms of ill-health and disease, consumption is the most insidious. Its approach is slow and stealthy. But at the last death comes with a rush. Consumption has been frequently pronounced incurable. It is not. It may be stopped—warded off—at almost any stage. But if the sufferer neglects to take the proper remedy in the proper way, death is swift and certain.

Consumption like almost all manner of disease has its inception in a trio of all embracing disorders. They are "imperfect digestion," "irregular bowels," and "impure blood." They are triplets. One is dependent for existence upon the other. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is the best of all known remedies for this disorder. It corrects disordered digestion, invigorates the liver, regulates the bowels, makes the blood pure and the nerves strong. It is the great blood-maker and flesh-builder. It soothes and invigorates the nerves. It tones up body and brain. It cures ninety-eight per cent of all cases of consumption.

Mrs. Rebecca F. Gardner of Grafton, York Co., Va., writes: "When I was married I weighed one hundred and twenty-five pounds. I was taken sick and reduced in health and broke out with a disease which my doctor said was cancer. He treated my disease but failed to do me any good, and I fell away to 50 pounds. I began using Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and thank God and you, I began to improve. When I began taking 'Discovery' my weight was 50 pounds and now I weigh 120 pounds and have only taken two bottles. I cannot say too much about the medicine. My husband is one of the happiest men in the world. He says I look younger than I did the first time he ever saw me, and that was fifteen years ago. I began using a well woman, and do all of my housework, tend to my fowls and cow and do some work in the garden. It is a miracle that I am cured."

Health and happiness form a partnership in the garden of life. It has never been dissolved. You cannot have one without the other. Constipation is the usual cause of ill-health. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are tiny, sugar-coated, granules. They cure constipation. One is a gentle laxative, and two a mild cathartic. They never gripe. Druggists sell them.

THE CATTLE QUARANTINE.

More Correspondence on the Subject—California Discussing the Question at Washington.

The question of raising the quarantine and permitting California cattle from the infected district to be shipped into Nevada is still under discussion at Washington. Yesterday the following was received from the Secretary of Agriculture:

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 23.

To Governor Sadler, Carson City, Nevada:—This Department has numerous urgent requests to allow persons, who claim to own ranches in Nevada, to move their cattle from quarantine district of California. Has your State any Board or officer who could supervise the movement of such animals and compel their isolation until safe, and do you favor admission of these cattle?

To this the following reply, which is in accord with the expressed opinions of the Elko Cattle Association and many cattlemen, was sent:

CARSON CITY, Nevada, March 23.

To Hon. James Wilson, Secretary of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.:—No Board nor officer in Nevada is authorized by law to supervise the movement of cattle from an infected district. Cattle Associations and cattle owners generally are opposed to admission of cattle from quarantined districts.

REINHOLD SADLER, Governor.

The following from Washington shows that California cattlemen are endeavoring to secure a change in the quarantine regulations:

President Hebron of the Monterey Cattlemen's Association, who is here in the interest of securing a change in the California cattle quarantine regulations, had a lengthy conference today with Secretary Wilson and Dr. Salmon of the Agricultural Department. He urges that the quarantine line be moved as far south as the Tehachapi range, or that cattlemen be permitted to drive their cattle across the line into Nevada in times of drought. He represented that many California cattlemen owned ranges in Nevada and there would be no danger of contagion by driving their cattle across the line, as there was no disease among California cattle. He considered the Tehachapi range the natural boundary line.

Secretary Wilson thought there would be no objection from the Nevada authorities to the proposed plan, and if he could get satisfactory assurances from them he was willing to permit California cattle to cross the line into Nevada.

Hebron presented a number of resolutions of the California and Nevada Associations favoring a change in the present quarantine line.

Charles Kaiser, the New Manager, of the Water and Light Company, Pushing Improvements.

A large force of men has been put at work cleaning the Highland Ditch and the work will be prosecuted as rapidly as possible until the ditch is as clean as it can be made. The Reno Water, Land & Light Co. will endeavor to keep the high pressure on the mains all the while, but if the water is a little muddy the people will know the cause.

As soon as the ditch is put in order the company will commence investigations with a view of putting in operation a large pumping plant to pump with their abundant water power, from a well near their present electric light station across to the reservoirs; and if the proposition is found to be practicable, the plant will be installed. The plan is believed to be feasible, and it is the opinion that the result will be much better water than can be had in any other manner.

If the pumping plant is installed, then the city will be supplied in that manner, and the company will immediately extend its Highland ditch to Prosser and Spanish Springs Valleys and so bring about 10,000 acres of land into production. This will be of great value to Reno, and the construction will necessitate the expenditure of many thousands of dollars.

The company is also negotiating for a new 1,300 light incandescent electric lighting machine, and as soon as it is installed it is proposed to make a very material reduction in the price of house lighting, also in all the branches of their electric light service. The capacity of the machine now in use is only 600 incandescent lamps and the machine has been working above its capacity for a long time back. During the coming Summer the company will install boilers and engine at the light station to guard against trouble from anchor ice next Winter, by being in position and always ready to substitute steam power for the water wheel when needed. Improvement is the order of the day with Senator Kaiser, the genial manager. His action so far in lighting the street lights regardless of a contract with the city, shows that he is determined to give the people the service, at any rate for the present.

Reno Has a Psychological Wonder.

EDITOR JOURNAL:—The "prosperity" writer for the Gazette is so intoxicated with enthusiasm that he oversteps the bounds of reason and makes some of the most extravagant statements seen in print for many years. Let us analyze his statement that the farmers of Kansas and Nebraska have paid off several hundred million dollars of mortgages during the first year of McKinley's administration.

Now for figures that do not lie. The State of Kansas has a population of 1,200,000 depending wholly on the resources of Kansas farms for their livelihood. The total farm value of the agricultural products of Kansas farms for the year 1897 was less than one hundred and eighty million dollars. One million two hundred thousand human beings had to be sheltered, fed, clothed, educated and taxed. In addition to this they had agricultural machinery to buy and repair. Some interest, sickness and funeral expenses to pay, and all to come out of the farm value of the products of Kansas farms.

Allowing that these combined expenses foot up one hundred and fifty dollars per capita, a very modest estimate, and we have a total of one hundred and eighty million dollars, a sum that exhausts the farm value of the entire crop with not a cent left to pay off farm mortgages and what is true of Kansas is also true of Nebraska. Is it not the essence of gall for the polished "prosperity" exhorter in the Gazette to tell the intelligent people of Reno that the farmers of Kansas and Nebraska are living on wind pudding and are applying double the value of their crops to the payment of farm mortgages?

FARMER.

Reno, Nevada, March 23, 1898.

The Hockey-Wheeler Company.

Better weather and conditions generally made it more favorable for theater goers last evening and "Shawn Aroon" drew a good sized audience at the opera house last night. As promised by the management the play was well staged and well presented and the hearty laughter and frequent applause showed that the audience was appreciative and well pleased.

The bill to-night will be "Ten-Mile Croaking." The story of the play deals with an adventures, Helen Arcott, and her scheming husband, Captain Van Dorn. In order to blackmail the rich and aged Squire Highlee, Helen contracts a marriage with the latter without first going through the details of securing a divorce from Van Dorn. She endeavors at first to elich a large sum of money from the Squire in order to satisfy the demands of Van Dorn and later conceives the plan of murdering the Squire after the latter had made a will in her favor. "Rex," the bright and devoted niece of the Squire blocks, one by one, the wicked schemes of her aunt, and Van Dorn is struck by lightning while in the act of robbing Rex of the letters proving his relations with Helen Arcott.

The play ends with the complete discomfiture of the adventures. The interest of the audience is sustained throughout the entire play and a number of dramatic climaxes serve to bring into action the full dramatic ability of the players. Every seat should be filled. Price 10, 20 and 30 cents.

A Change of Firm.

Miss Clara Dickinson has purchased Mr. F. B. Porter's interest in the store lately carried on by Charles Lake, and she is now sole proprietor. Mr. Porter has also sold his interest in the telephone system, Mrs. Mona Lake being the purchaser.

Miss Dickinson is a wideawake business woman and will doubtless make the old Lake store the leading stationery and bookstore in the town as well as the depot for the latest magazines and periodicals and fashion books. In addition she will carry a selected stock of blank books, pocket memorandums, gold pens, pencils and a general assortment of notions and novelties. Smokers' articles, fine cigars and tobaccos will be a specialty.

Her store will be the general office and "central" of the telephone system where the "Hello girl" will be on duty during all business hours.

Miss Dickinson's many friends will wish her success in her new venture and the very best way to aid her and assure her success, is by giving her patronage whenever the occasion calls for it and suggesting the same course to others.

Wool Is Worth Money.

There is a good demand at present for lambs of a certain class from country buyers. Those who are comparatively near by and who have good shearing facilities have been purchasing a good many lately for the purpose of procuring the wool. Presumably there is a profit in this business, or it wouldn't be carried on, but it certainly can't be very great. Buyers consider the value of the wool when they purchase the lamb. Of course, they don't give the full market price, but there can hardly be difference enough to warrant paying freight and other charges two ways. Besides heavy shorn lambs will soon be at big discount when the spring crops begin to come to market.—Chicago Drovers Journal.

The Game Is Declared Off.

The San Francisco Chronicle publishes an item in which it is stated that a challenge from the Berkeley girls to the Nevada State University girls to play a game of basket ball was accepted by wire Monday. An inquiry at the State University brought forth a denial of any acceptance whatever as far as the Nevada girls were concerned. It is not on account of being afraid to meet the California girls, but the Nevadans have not been practicing to any extent and are not prepared to play in a contest of such importance.

It had been arranged by the Berkeley girls to pay all expenses of the Nevada team and entertain them royally, but the game seems to be off.

THE CATTLE QUARANTINE.

More Correspondence on the Subject—California Discussing the Question at Washington.

The question of raising the quarantine and permitting California cattle from the infected district to be shipped into Nevada is still under discussion at Washington. Yesterday the following was received from the Secretary of Agriculture:

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 23.

To Governor Sadler, Carson City, Nevada:—This Department has numerous urgent requests to allow persons, who claim to own ranches in Nevada, to move their cattle from quarantine district of California. Has your State any Board or officer who could supervise the movement of such animals and compel their isolation until safe, and do you favor admission of these cattle?

To this the following reply, which is in accord with the expressed opinions of the Elko Cattle Association and many cattlemen, was sent:

CARSON CITY, Nevada, March 23.

To Hon. James Wilson, Secretary of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.:—No Board nor officer in Nevada is authorized by law to supervise the movement of cattle from an infected district. Cattle Associations and cattle owners generally are opposed to admission of cattle from quarantined districts.

REINHOLD SADLER, Governor.

The following from Washington shows that California cattlemen are endeavoring to secure a change in the quarantine regulations:

President Hebron of the Monterey Cattle Raisers' Association, who is here in the interest of securing a change in the California cattle quarantine regulations, had a lengthy conference today with Secretary Wilson and Dr. Salmon of the Agricultural Department. He argues that the quarantine line be moved as far south as the Tehachapi range, or that cattlemen be permitted to drive their cattle across the line into Nevada in times of drought. He represented that many California cattlemen owned ranges in Nevada and there would be no danger of contagion by driving their cattle across the line, as there was no disease among California cattle. He considered the Tehachapi range the natural boundary line.

Secretary Wilson thought there would be no objection from the Nevada authorities to the proposed plan, and if he could get satisfactory assurances from them he was willing to permit California cattle to cross the line into Nevada.

Hebron presented a number of resolutions of the California and Nevada Associations favoring a change in the present quarantine line.

The capacity of the machine now in use is only 600 incandescent lamps and the machine has been working above its capacity for a long time back. GOING TO THE BOTTOM OF MATTERS.

There is much dilly dallying in Administration circles with the Cuban question. It is suspected by many that the Department of State has information from American Consuls in Cuba that it does not give to the public or to Congress. The delay in reporting the cause of the destruction of the Maine is causing much adverse comment and members of Congress as well as the public generally are getting restive. Representative Wheeler has introduced a resolution to relieve this tension. It provides for a joint committee to be composed of seven Senators and seven Representatives to consider our relations with Spain growing out of the Cuban question. All messages heretofore received, or which may hereafter be received from the President referring to this question are to be referred to the committee.

The committee is to have authority to send for persons and papers to take evidence and report with as little delay as possible the conditions that prevail in Cuba; what part of the Spanish debt is a burden upon Cuban revenues; what protection is given American citizens and their interest by the Spanish and the facts regarding the atrocities perpetrated by Spain on the island. The committee is required to recommend to Congress what action should be taken by that body.

An investigation of the character proposed would throw much light upon the Cuban question and enable Congress to act intelligently in the matter. There appears to be enough evidence at present to warrant the United States in recognizing the independence of Cuba, or at least giving Cubans the rights of belligerents, so that they can purchase supplies in the United States as the Spaniards are permitted to do. But the House of Representatives will not act in the matter, and the President does not seem to favor the recognition of Cuban belligerency, though the people of the United States, with the exception of those interested in bond deals, sympathize with the Cubans.

IMPORTANT MEASURE INTRODUCED BY NEVADA'S CONGRESSMAN.

Hon. Francis G. Newlands, Congressman from Nevada, has introduced a bill directing the Secretary of the Interior to make surveys for, and to determine and report on the cost of erecting reservoirs on certain rivers and their tributaries in the United States, and making an appropriation therefor.

He has also introduced a bill to create a public land Commission, consisting of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, the Director of the Geological Survey and three other persons to be appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate.

The commission is empowered by the act to employ the necessary secretary, clerks and a superintendent of hydrographic divisions and their assistants and to incur all expense necessary for the examination, utilization and conservation of the lands now under control of the United States.

The commission shall also cause to be made, surveys and contoured maps of the areas of public lands classifying them according to their adaptation for raising trees, for pasture or for agriculture. The water supply is to be determined and its fluctuation and waste together with the possibilities for underground supply from experimental or artesian wells. The character and value of the timber available for firewood and other purposes, without injury to the water supply.

Other provisions are made for the occupation or utilization of the lands; rules and regulations relative to the protection of forests, the recommendations to Congress for the irrigation of the arid districts and an annual report to Congress recommending more efficient legislation toward attaining the objects enumerated.

Dr. Geo. E. Powell of La Crosse Wis., has cabled an acceptance to the challenge of Barco El Cardo, a Spanish Marquis of Madrid, to fight Senator Mason of Illinois a duel on account of the latter's utterances regarding the Spanish Government during a session of the United States Senate. Dr. Powell offers to meet the Spanish Don in behalf of Senator Mason and chooses as weapons the 44 calibre army revolver. The language in the doctor's cablegram accepting the challenge is not susceptible of being misconstrued or misunderstood by the Spanish Marquis. It simply means fight and fight to kill and the Spaniard will either have to fight or take water and make himself a subject of ridicule for the whole world.

The report of the Maine Court of Inquiry is expected at Washington today. It is said that the Spanish Minister has telegraphed his Government that the Court finds that the destruction of the Maine was due to external causes. How he found that out before the report reached Washington is not stated.

A SEVERE storm, the worst of the season, has swept over Nebraska, Kansas and Missouri. The temperature in many places fell forty degrees in a few hours and at Beatrice, Nebraska, the mercury dropped seventy degrees in twelve hours.

TELEGRAPHIC NOTES.

An explosion at the United States Smokeless Powder Works at Point San Pedro, near San Rafael, on Tuesday caused the death of Captain C. A. Jenke, a well known militia man, and Charles Nelson, a laborer. It is supposed that the explosion was caused by a hot bearing in the machinery.

Thirty-nine men are now reported to have perished in the wreck of the bark Helen W. Almy, which was caught in a blow and capsized outside the Heads off San Francisco Sunday. The bark had sailed for Copper River, Alaska, and was loaded with gold seekers. It is said that no one survives to tell the story of the wreck.

Passenger train No. 18, north-bound, was held up at Cross Creek near Goshen on the Southern Pacific at a late hour Tuesday night. The robbers are believed to be a remnant of the old Evans-Sontag gang. The express car was blown to atoms after the messenger had been ordered out. The mail car was also robbed. Two men were all that were seen, but it is believed that more were connected with the hold up.

Chaplain Chidwic has completed his mortuary report, which shows that 257 men and two officers perished by the explosion of the Maine; six died of their wounds in the San Ambrosio Hospital and one died on the Spanish transport. One hundred and seventy-one bodies have been recovered, 61 of which have been identified. There have been 161 bodies buried at Havana and 11 at Key West. This is the official report, made public, after careful correction.

The spirit of war rules in Spain, and Castilian leaders talk of fighting for the nation's honor. The situation is critical and war seems to be inevitable. Captain-General Blanco has sent his resignation to Madrid, but it has a string attached to it. Admiral Martorela has sent a similar conditional resignation. Blanco's action is really an ultimatum to the home government. If the Spanish torpedo fleet is halted at the Canaries at President McKinley's command then Blanco will retire from office. It is thought that Blanco is not bluffing and that Sagasta will not dare to violate the demand of the American Administration.

GREATEST OF COLONIZERS

Much of the Earth Owe Its Settlement to the Landing of Gold.

It has been well said that gold is the greatest of colonizers, and this has proved especially true in the last half of the present century. To what lone regions the foot steps of man were attracted in the earliest times by the discovery of gold we may not know, but within the last half of living men great regions of the earth's surface have owed their settlement and occupation solely to the finding by search or accident of a few shining particles in the earth.

California was a remote and outlying province of Mexico, uninhabited by Indians, gathered in missions or scattered abroad, and cattle herds and their dependents, visited by a few ships each year in search of a freight of hides, when the picking up of a few grains of gold in the banks of a mill race called the gold seekers from the four quarters of the earth and transformed a wilderness into a populous empire.

Australia was a corner of the earth selected on account of its remoteness from their former home as a place of banishment for British criminals when the gleam of gold illuminated it and filled the distant harbors with sails and their shores with cities.

South Africa might have remained forever a grassy waste, the home of savages contending with the Boers and the British for the possession of unlimitable pastures, had not gold called the miner and those who follow him to build Johannesburg.—Kansas City Times

The Sea.

It is the sea which ennobles everything. Between the line and the surf there was but the ancient foreshore, covered with prickly tamarisks and mauve colored heath, with yellow sand conspicuous here and there. At the limit of the foreshore the rugged border line cut clear into a deep and somber blue. It is blue—blue as any grape on this cluster which hangs in the cooling breeze. The azure deepens, filling up a good half of the range of sight; the white sail of a fishing smack floats alone, like a hollow shell; the eternal monotone of ocean is borne upon the ear. Draw near and see the leaping silver foam.

Above this intense blue the sky is transparently, superbly pale, and the stars are hurrying to light their lamps. There is not a living soul, nor a plant, nor any sign of the hand of man. There might be nereids and fauns dancing on the strand, as in the days when the world was young.—H. A. Taine in "Journeys Through France."

Out of His Depth.

"What," said the girl with loose hair around her ears and a spasmodic manner, "is your opinion of the ultimate destiny of the human race?"
"Did I—er—understand you to say the ultimate destiny of the human race?" inquired Willie Washington.
"Yea."
"Why—um—if you want my candid opinion, I should say that—uh—that it's a long ways off."—Washington Star.

Could Stand It No Longer.

Mrs. Firmly was working savagely away with the hash knife when her next door neighbor called.

"What in the world is that?" asked the visitor.

"That," with more vicious jabbing than before, "is what is left of Firmly's camera. I'm destroying the last vestige of it. I have pulverized the lenses, burned the frames and am now chopping the rest of the infernal machine into shreds. I'll show him. That thing has cost us a young fortune. He has bought every attachment and improvement that has been placed on the market. They filled a saratoga trunk and there were plates enough to roof a greenhouse.

"I might have become reconciled, but he never took a picture that you could recognize, and yet he was always at it. Three of the children went down with the croup because he would have us on the front porch to be photographed. The negatives looked as though some one had swiped the glass with a whitewash brush loaded with lampblack. He had us out in blizzards, rainstorms and the hottest weather just to experiment. Every shot was a dismal failure, but he always had excuses and was just going to produce something that would be a work of art. He'd invite friends by the score to have their pictures taken, and two-thirds of them are mad because nothing ever came of it. I've argued and pleaded and wept, but he has kept buying and making failures."

"But won't he be very angry?"
"He can't get half as mad as I am," with an awful stab. "If he can ever find hide or hair of this camera when I'm through with it, he's welcome. If he buys another, I'll get a divorce."—Detroit Free Press

Pay of Old Time Architects.

As near as we can discover the architect of "ye olden tyme" did not receive for his services a very exorbitant sum. Recently some members of the French school at Delphi unearthed several slabs of marble which bear inscriptions of great interest, dating as they do from the fourth century before Christ. The inscriptions, which cover about 200 lines, give the price of work for building operations in Greece at the period named, and from them we learn that an architect was paid at the rate of $150 per annum or less. This was little enough surely, even if its purchasing power is multiplied, as it should be, five or six times. Sir Christopher Wren received for his services the magnificent sum of $1,000 per year for more than 20 years while rebuilding London. His head draftsman received about $300 per year, while assistants received from $80 to $125 per year. French and German architects were not even so well paid at the same period. Bad as this was, it was better than the remuneration many of the older architects received, for in the far east if an artist made a noble design and erected a building worthy of admiration his chances of being "suddenly removed" by order of the king were many. This step was taken in order to prevent a rival king from obtaining the services of an architect who might be able to so improve his plans that a finer and nobler building would be executed.—Architecture and Building.

Wolf Children.

The adoption of human infants by wild and carnivorous quadrupeds has obtained more or less credence among the vulgar from the earliest ages, and while such today are for the most part poohpoohed as idle tales the skeptics have little idea of the evidence that has been offered in substantiation thereof.

Half a century ago the iconoclast who would have dared question that Romulus and Remus owed their nurturing to a she wolf would have been laughed to scorn by most lovers of the classics. Twenty-five years later the animal was substituted, on the part of tutors, by a woman named Lupa—a most inglorious conclusion, derived solely from imagination. Today the tendency to ignore all sentiment causes such ideas to receive scant courtesy, and when sentiment is introduced as evidence is met by the undeniable statement that the same miracle is accredited with preserving the lives of many gods and heroes of antiquity. Consequently if a single case of a child being fostered and reared by animals can be substantiated beyond question the result will be to rehabilitate as history much literature that solely on this account has been relegated to the realm of fiction.—Lippincott's

Trouble About S and F.

Two instances of various readings, possibly from confusing sand f, may be worth giving.

In the Rev. A. B. Grosart's edition of Giles Fletcher's poem, "Christ's Victory and Triumph," the reading in part 3, stanza 44, is, "And as he fought * * * to fly from his own heart." The editor remarks on this, "I read fought, but I am not sure that fought is not intended." In Griffin & Farran's "Ancient and Modern Library" the reading is sought.

In the Wesleyan Methodist Hymn Book (Hymn No. 126, verse 2) the present reading stands:

In nature's strength I sought in vain
For what my God refused to give.
I could not then the mastery gain
Or lord of all my passion live.

This reading appears to have been adopted by John Wesley in 1780, but what Charles Wesley wrote was quite different:

In nature's strength I fought in vain
For what my God refused to give.
I could not then the mastery gain
